You lied to us. We cried for her. Our hearts broke for her. Why didn't you just tell the truth?
I found out and I cried and cried. I prayed to God. I asked Him to take care of her soul and be with her family and it was all fake?
I get that you guys tried to do what you thought was best for her. I know you tried to help her. But you hurt so many people. Why?

I'm sorry. I forgive you. I just, when I heard the news, my mental state simply crashed due to not being able to-I just, was ruined you could say. And I really am upset of how much you played us. You even made some of us crack mentally even more! I find this a little suspicious, yes, but if you want to keep on lying to make yourself feel better (grief) then you can. I can't stop you. Just please, don't do it again. And how could you do this to us! We all grieved for her! We all did, I did. And to know she's alive I just...can't. Even talking about this is making my mentality crack more. Which is why this is probably pretty weird and out there. Just know, we're not mad or sad... we're dissapointed.

Whether this is indeed true or not, it's apparent either way that Hurricane and her family are going through hard times right now. I sincerely hope that everything works itself out and that your family can be together again.

On the other hand, you still lied to us. I barely knew Hurricane and I was still devastated upon being told that she had died. I can imagine it was many times worse to hear for those who were closer to her. You could have told us something different, or even the truth, but you decided to tell us she was dead. I'm not angry and I don't hate you for it, but, like Nova said, I'm dissapointed.

I will still keep #Remember Hurricane though, to remember who she was before this terrible decline of events. Ha. Called it.
Ok...where to begin...

First off, after that, I can't believe anything you just said. How can you expect us to trust you after weaving such a huge web of lies, and continuing it for this long? So many people here were literally in tears over, what, a whole story just to cover up the fact that she was taking a break? Why couldn't you have just said that? Everything would be chill.

To everyone so quickly forgiving her...think about it, will you? You don't just tell everyone that someone important to them is dead as a cover up story.

So yeah, overall not too happy, and not even because of emotions. Solely because you did manipulate everyone here, no matter what you think and everyone else says.

I... Honestly don't know what to think of this.

I'm not mad at you but I'm confused, relieved, betrayed and oddly a little proud

I understand you are going through a hard time in your family, with Hurricane very far away from you and your home. Having to live with the guilt of lying to us and to tell the truth to us in the end. It's hard to resurface when you have dived so deep into the ocean, and many people usually give up and drown. Even the ones who make it back up have to take a long time to recover. It takes much courage to speak the truth and I'm proud you did. I'm rehlieved Hurricane is alive and having the help she needs.

Although, when I heard about her "death" my life shattered. I wasn't even that close to her but I sobbed in my bed that night, praying that she'll have a better life up there. Even my mom looked at me funny when I woke up. When there were threads accusing you of lying and faking Skylar's death I truly believed they were wrong and overreacting. But when this came out my betrayal level boosted up from a zero to a 100. I had probably offended people just for nothing in those threads(I'm really sorry Necro) I know I should have thought before I posted, but Past Me was being stupid. Fennec even made a thread asking for Tui to name a WoF character after Skylar. Guess she doesn't have to that now!

Also, like what Atbash said, faking someone's death is not okay. It's serious. If I had acted the way I have about Hurricane's death, imagine what the people close to her must have felt.

and, again, I'm not mad, just betrayed

[Mods, please let this through]

How can you all actually believe any of this, besides the fact that hurricane's alive? For all we know, this is Hurricane, talking to us right now, faking her death, posing as her sister and then 'coming clean.' Just think about this. I don't mean to be a naysayer, but any situation could be entirely possible and you should all think about it before jumping immediately to forgiveness.

I can't be calm about this. Even if her parents did tell her to (which 1. May be a lie and 2. Is a lousy excuse) she still did it. She played a huge part in this.
I wasn't very close with Hurricane, but I'm sure plenty people were. Do you know what it feels like to lose a friend? To have someone you love here one day and be torn from your life the next? It's the worst kind of pain in the world. Putting other people through that is inexcuseable.

I'll be able to forgive her if she continues to prove that she really is sorry for this, but I can't right now. I can't just calm down and say "oh yeah it's okay that you told us our friend died and broke some hearts!" I'm angry. I'm sad. I feel betrayed and furious. And the people who were closer to Hurricane have more of a right to that anger and sadness than I do.

What Rune said. ^^

Listen, you don't have to forgive her for lying, but you can't force others to not forgive Mael.
It's wrong to break someone's heart and lie about someone's death, but people are allowed to think and feel the way they want to.

If we keep this up, this thread will probably be locked, and everyone will end up horribly mad/angry at each other.
The forums aren't a place to fight about what we don't know, but a place to convey respectful, open opinions to stuff that we do know and/or is a polite, likely theory.

Fighting between this subject will discourage Maelstrom, and we might not get the real, full truth.

~~I love how people are getting super mad at Maelstrom or forgiving her or anything else and then here I am like "i didn't mean to click on this thread"~~

I don't know what to think right now. I want to believe you, but I'm not sure that I can. I mean, I don't think your parents would force you to come on here and lie and say your sister died. They might have offhandedly suggested that, but I think that might be a stretch.
And yes, if you're telling the truth, I'm happy Hurricane isn't dead. But what you did wasn't right. People here cried, they mourned, they prayed. All because you didn't want to say that she was taking a break to get therapy. You didn't even have to say that. You could have simply said she just needed a break. But you didn't need to say she died.

I... I don't know how to react to this.

@Maelstrom, if you're telling the truth

I'm so, so sorry about how people are reacting right now, but I'm not sure I can entirely blame them.

Yes, saying Skylar died when she didn't was pretty bad, as was using a car crash where other people and kids actually did die as cover-up.
And people who never knew her cried and prayed for her, wrote letters to Tui asking her to name a character Hurricane in her honor, typed and put their sigs in blue, put #RememberHurricane in their sigs, but most importantly, they all mourned and grieved. The ones who did know her were devastated. ^Ishmael broke down at his job. Peregrine made a memorial for her. I, myself, rarely cry, but was barely able to keep from doing so in the middle of the living room when I heard. ~~And I wrote something partly in her honor just yesterday, but that's irrelevant.~~ Some people might not be able to trust you anymore, might not completely forgive you.

But, I'm relieved she's alive, even if she's not who she used to be. I'm glad you came out and admitted it, instead of continuing to lie and pretend. I understand if your parents made you say that she died, even though I must admit I'm a bit doubtful. Again, I'm sorry about how people are reacting to this, but it's- it's hard, really, really, hard, learning that a friend died... and then being told it was a* lie.
Just know, that, it will all blow over eventually. If you need comfort or virtual hugs and desserts, just remember that there are people here who will support you, including me. For now, you can be yourself. Or you can keep on acting like Hurricane, if that's what she wants. Either way, I hope you can stay, and nobody is too mad at you for saying this. Thank you, for saying the truth. The truth is is often the hardest thing to say...

Tell Skylar we miss her, if you can. Tell her we haven't forgotten her. And if you can, depending on what she thinks you told us, tell her we hope she feels better, and happier, soon. :)

@Maelstrom, if this isn't the whole truth

I'm sorry, but it does seem a little bit far-fetched.

Why would your parents tell you to say Skylar died? Why would she be going to Wisconsin, of all places?

I mean, I guess I'm just a little confused about this, especially since some things contradict...

But people are acting a little bit harsh, and I think you've read enough of these kinds of messages, so I'm just going, to end this here...

@Everone in general

*Please, just stop fighting.

It isn't going to help in the slightest bit, and you might just be causing a flame war over this.

Don't.

And stop acting like Maelstrom isn't here, and can't read your posts.

I cried.

More than I have in a long, long time.

I was downcast for weeks

I picked flowers and made a memorial for her

I didn’t want to travel in cars for a long time

My parents were concerned

I changed my whole siggy

I was broken, holes ripped in me

I eventually told them what happened

And you know what they said

”It might be a lie”

”You can’t always trust people on the internet”

But I didn’t believe them

Didn’t believe someone would lie about a close friend dying

But you know what?

They did.
